Send Love Today's New Blog Helps Volunteers Support Those Struggling with Brain Tumors

Berea, Ohio April 30, 2008 – Send Love Today (sendlovetoday.org) announces the launch of its volunteer blog at <http://sendlovetoday.blogspot.com/>. Sandi Mueller, blog master and cofounder of Send Love Today moderates this resource for sharing card making ideas and inspiration. The blog provides a forum for supporters, volunteers and donors where they share resources, inspiration and energy. The blog provides an interactive focal point for sharpening their efforts while strengthening and expanding this unique program of cards and gifts for those suffering through the trials of brain cancer.

About Send Love Today

Send Love Today provides support and comfort to anyone facing the journey of living with a brain tumor through a wonderful program of encouragement and friendship in the form of cards and small gifts sent lovingly by Send Love Today's volunteers, staff and founders. Send Love Today is a 501c3 charitable nonprofit organization inspired and founded in 2005 by Linda Thomas in memory of her late husband Stacey L. Thomas and cofounded by his sister -in-law Sandi Mueller. Together, they provide the energy, leadership and direction for Send Love Today's work in the field. Our goal is to provide the patients with as much emotional support and encouragement as we can during their journey with brain cancer.
